ANZ Head of Australian Economics, David Plank, commented:

Consumer confidence was close to unchanged over the weekend, consolidating at an above neutral level – though below the long-run average. Sentiment is higher than a year ago, but the comparison reflects the impact of the bushfires in late 2019 and early 2020. Within the detail, ‘future financial conditions’ stood out with a gain of 2.4% and remain well above the long-run average. Inflation expectations have pulled-back a touch from their recent high.
