Confidence continues its descent

- Consumer confidence dropped 3.5% last week, as Sydney, Victoria and South Australia remained under a lockdown, with cases rising in Sydney despite the tightened restrictions.
- All the subindices registered a fall, but the ones that capture current conditions fell furthest. Most notably, 'current economic conditions' dropped 6%. 'Current financial conditions' declined 3.4%.
- 'Future economic conditions' lost a more modest 0.5%. 'Future financial conditions' softened 1.2%.
- 'Time to buy a major household item' dropped 6.6% to its lowest level since mid-October 2020. 'Weekly inflation expectations' increased by 0.1ppt to 4.3%, its highest level since late March 2020, with the four-week moving average steady at 4.1%.

ANZ Head of Australian Economics, David Plank, commented:

Consumer confidence fell by 3.5% last week, to its lowest since early November 2020 right after Victoria's long second lockdown. Confidence fell in both Sydney (-2.2%) and Melbourne (-6.4%), but rose in Adelaide a touch (0.5%). Even with a much higher case load and longer lockdown, confidence in Sydney is a bit higher than in Melbourne. We would note that even during Melbourne's long lockdown in 2020 confidence levels in the two cities remained close. Sentiment declined in Brisbane (-6.1%) and Perth (-4.6%) despite the absence of lockdowns in those cities, further highlighting the interrelated nature of sentiment across Australia. Confidence remains well above the lows seen in the early stages of the pandemic, suggesting the economic hit from the current lockdowns will be less than that seen in the second quarter of 2020.
