Confidence fell a touch more

- Consumer confidence fell a further 0.6%, as the lockdown in Melbourne was extended for another week after a rise in the number of COVID-19 cases. The confidence subindices registered mixed results.
- ‘Current financial conditions’ fell 1.5%, while ‘future financial conditions’ improved by 2.0%.
- ‘Current economic conditions’ declined 3.1%, while ‘future economic conditions’ gained 1.5%.
- ‘Time to buy a major household item’ weakened 2.2%. ‘Weekly inflation expectations’ increased by 0.1ppt to 4.0%, keeping the four-week moving average at 3.8%. This is the highest weekly result for inflation expectations since March 2020.

ANZ-Roy Morgan Consumer Confidence and inflation expectations

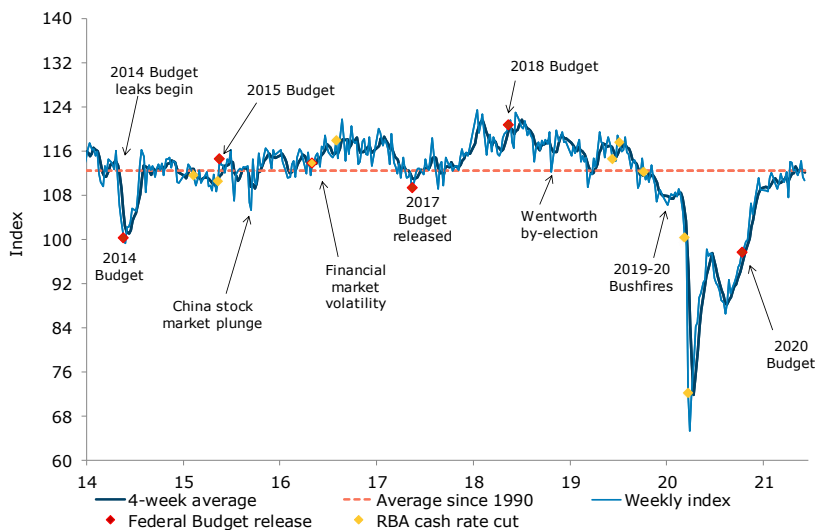

Last weekend (5-6 Jun)	Weekly change, %	Four-week average	Monthly average since 1990	Inflation expectations (four-week ma)
110.7	-0.6%	112.2	112.6	3.8%

This weekly ANZ-Roy Morgan Australian Consumer Confidence Rating is based on 1,528 interviews conducted online and over the telephone on the weekend. Not seasonally adjusted. Further data history on page 6.

ANZ Head of Australian Economics, David Plank, commented:

Consumer confidence fell another 0.6% as the lockdown in Melbourne was extended until at least 10 June. Confidence fell by 2.4% in Melbourne and by 0.6% in Brisbane, but it was up 4.3% in Sydney. The emergence of a more infectious strain of COVID is raising concerns that the lockdown could be extended again. This could have a more lasting impact on confidence than we have seen with recent snap lockdowns. Still, the fact that consumers became more confident about future financial and economic conditions suggests even a longer shutdown may not have a permanently dampening effect on overall sentiment.
