* From 3 January 2022, the interviews for the consumer confidence survey have taken place Monday to Sunday. Previously they were done at the weekend (Saturday and Sunday).

Marginal recovery

- Consumer confidence improved marginally, gaining 0.2% last week. This is the first improvement since the last week of June. Among the mainland states, South Australia, New South Wales and Queensland led the rise, while confidence declined in Victoria and Western Australia.
- 'Weekly inflation expectations' softened 0.2ppt to 5.8%, its lowest since mid-June.
- The subindex level performance was mixed. 'Economic conditions next year' strengthened 4%, while 'Economic conditions in the next five years' recovered 3.3%.
- 'Current financial conditions' declined 2.0%, marking ten straight weeks of falls. 'Future financial conditions' edged up 0.1%.
- 'Time to buy a major household item' weakened for the third consecutive week, down 4%.

ANZ-Roy Morgan Consumer Confidence and inflation expectations

Last week (11–17 July)	Weekly change, %	Four-week average	Monthly average since 1990	Inflation expectations (four-week ma)
81.8	0.2%	83.0	112.2	5.9%

The weekly ANZ-Roy Morgan Australian Consumer Confidence Rating is based on 1,480 interviews conducted online and over the telephone during the week to Sunday*. Not seasonally adjusted. Further data history on page 6.

ANZ Head of Australian Economics, David Plank, commented:

Consumer confidence steadied as concerns about the economic outlook ebbed, likely driven by the strong labour market print last week. High inflation and rising interest rates are feeding into households' weak assessment of their financial conditions. That is yet to show up in spending behaviour, however. Inflation expectations dropped to a one month low, with global fuel prices moderating. Australia's wholesale petrol prices declined last week fuelling hopes that retail prices will moderate. This will likely be good news for sentiment if it occurs.
