*From 3 January 2022, the interviews for the consumer confidence survey have taken place Monday to Sunday. Previously they were done at the weekend (Saturday and Sunday).

Modest uptrend continues

- Consumer confidence gained 2.1% last week, its third consecutive weekly increase. Among the mainland states, confidence improved in Queensland and SA, while it dropped slightly in NSW, Victoria, and WA.
- 'Weekly inflation expectations' dropped 0.5ppt to 5.5%, its lowest level since late May. Its four-week moving average fell 0.1ppt to 5.8%.
- Four of the five confidence subindices registered gains. 'Current financial conditions' rose a touch by 0.5%, while 'future financial conditions' increased 5.3%.
- 'Current economic conditions' gained 1%. 'Future economic conditions' rebounded 3.6% almost reversing the 3.9% fall the week before.
- 'Time to buy a major household item' decreased 1.5%, bucking the overall trend.

ANZ-Roy Morgan Consumer Confidence and inflation expectations

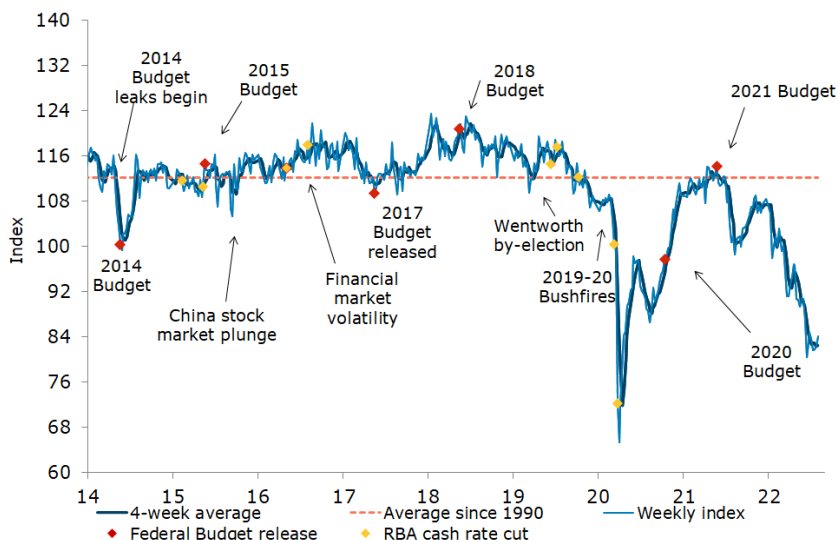

Last week (25–31 July)	Weekly change, %	Four-week average	Monthly average since 1990	Inflation expectations (four-week ma)
84.1	2.1%	82.5	112.2	5.8%

The weekly ANZ-Roy Morgan Australian Consumer Confidence Rating is based on 1,483 interviews conducted online and over the telephone during the week to Sunday*. Not seasonally adjusted. Further data history on page 6.

ANZ Head of Australian Economics, David Plank, commented:

Consumer confidence rose 2.1% last week, despite news that headline inflation exceeded 6% in the year to June. The sharp fall in petrol prices over the past three weeks may have been more important for sentiment. The drop likely explains why household inflation expectations fell 0.5ppt to 5.5%. The only confidence subindex that decreased was 'good time to buy a major household item' – ongoing weakness in the housing market and pressure on household budgets being likely reasons. Despite the gain in in the past three weeks, sentiment remains at a very low level and vulnerable to more tightening from the RBA.
