ANZ Senior Economist, Adelaide Timbrell, commented:

ANZ-Roy Morgan Australian Consumer Confidence jumped up last week, nearly offsetting the fall from the week before. While still very weak, the four-week moving average for consumer confidence is at its highest since May. The four-week average of consumer confidence is rising for all housing cohorts, perhaps representing some green shoots in confidence as the cash rate stabilises, the labour market stays resilient and inflation falls. Indeed, inflation expectations fell to 5.2%, the lowest result since mid-May.
