ANZ Senior Economist, Adelaide Timbrell, commented:

Consumer confidence remained virtually unchanged last week with a slight fall from the week before. This is the third consecutive week with confidence among the worst ten results since the COVID outbreak in Australia. Among those paying off their mortgage confidence dropped sharply (-4.4pts), to its lowest level since early April 2020 and to 11pts below the average for all housing cohorts. Confidence about current and future economic conditions are at their lowest level since November 2022, while current financial conditions was at its worst level since December 2022. Future financial conditions rose 0.9pts in the week.
